Synopsis.

Joan Thayer is young and ambitious for a stage career. She meets George Gauthier, a wealthy and influential banker, who is the "angle" for many of the most successful plays of the season. Gauthier falls madly in love with Joan, although he has a mistress, Andree De Vigne, who plays with him. Gauthier secures an engagement with the largest musical comedy in town for Joan, and while a member of the chorus, she meets and falls in love with Henri Renault, a young poet.

Gauthier, however, is very persistent, and showers Joan with his attentions. She finally consents to marry him, but she cannot forget the young dark eyed poet whom she loves. Gauthier, who realizes that Joan does not love him, consents to her plea that she remains a wife in name only until she learns to care for him.

Andree De Vigne, Gauthier's former mistress, further complicates matters when she tries to blackmail Gauthier. Joan, however, is indifferent, and when Gauthier realizes that she will never learn to love him, but is actually making herself sick with longing for Henri, he consents to a divorce. Joan marries Henri, and Andree contents herself with another ardent suitor, who leads her to the altar. She had hoped that Gauthier would ask her to become his wife after his divorce, but Gauthier loved Joan sincerely, and when she leaves him for another man, he is left alone with his memories.
